Professional Profile

She develops her professional practice as a consultant for sports institutions, federations, and committees, and as a psychologist working with athletes and high-performance teams.

She advises on strategic processes within sports ecosystems, focusing on their long-term development and sustainability through an interdisciplinary approach. Her work aims to safeguard both identity and the human dimension of athletic careers.

She conducts assessments of individual and group dynamics among the various stakeholders involved in sports organizations. She designs programs that promote assertive communication, effective leadership, and a comprehensive approach to decision-making.

She also supports the implementation of protocols that seek to balance athletic performance with human sustainability.
